UNDER the heading of "The Governor of Victoria and Public Opinion," the following appears in a contemporary:—Yesterday (10th June) was the day for the monthly mail summary, and the Argus sums up its indictment against the Governor, first in a leading article, and then in an elaborate statement filling ten columns. I have already characterized this indictment as showing remorseless ability, a most resolute purpose, and singular sentences in the manipulation of details. The summing up is that Sir George Bowen has artfully and systematically falsified facts, suppressed evidence, and public documents in quotation, in defiance of the law, denied justice, and the characters of her Majesty's subjects, plunged the colony into a state of terrorism, abused the confidence in him by the Secretary of State, received her Majesty. It is really a most extraordinary charge in a journal of wide circulation and undoubted influence as the Argus. It is vain to conceal it, Sir George Bowen will never escape this terrible indictment. No ever did; none ever could. They are random charges of malicious and of political spite; they are not at length—facts and dates are quotations from different and different sources are given in parallel columns, the conclusion made unanswerable.

Were I Sir George Bowen I would have those ten columns left in my room for all the honor that Queen Victoria could confer upon me.

The Government of the Governor has been duly forwarded to the Queen. I call it by its name, although the real form of it is a petition signed by about 500 of our leading merchants, landowners, bankers, &c., including seventeen Executive Councilors. It is a terrible document for Sir George Bowen, for of late days the Colonial Office has not been used to have impeachments of the kind laid before it.

A YANKEE journalist has offered a reward of $1000 for a tale that will make his hair stand on end. Before ambitious authors enter the field as competitors, it may be as well to understand that the generous journalist is perfectly ready.

BRUTAL MURDER AND ATTEMPTED MURDER AT WANCHAI BY A EUROPEAN.

A brutal murder was committed last night about 11 o'clock at 163 Queen's Road East by a man named Charles Newman, who it may be remembered was a few months since charged with assaulting Mr. Whitehead, the Inspector of Brothels. The victim is a Portuguese named Servando Cesar Gutierrez, a young man who is well known in the colony. Newman is a man who has never borne a remarkably good character in Hongkong, as, besides being much addicted to drinking, he is unfortunately possessed of a most ungovernable temper. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for the assault on Whitehead, but was released by H. E. the Governor before the expiration of the sentence. It seems that he went to Shanghai shortly after leaving the Gaol, accompanied by a woman named Louisa Lockhardt. At Shanghai Newman does not appear to have turned over a new leaf, for his temper again got him into trouble, as will be seen by a paragraph which we give elsewhere from the N. C. Herald. Newman and the woman returned to Hongkong on Tuesday last, and it appears were still on the best of terms. It would now appear that Newman had resolved to proceed to San Francisco in the next steamer, and had told the woman so, at the same time telling her that Gutierrez would take care of her. Gutierrez went to the house (No. 163 Queen's Road East, better known as Spring Gardens, Wanchai), at which Newman and the woman were residing, having been taken there by Newman himself. This was yesterday evening, and the result is that the wretched man has lost his life at the hands of Newman, who hacked him to death with a tomahawk whilst under the influence of a fit of jealousy, heightened doubtless by a little over-indulgence in drink. The woman had apparently tried to shield the deceased, and was thus herself wounded so severely that there is little or no hope of her recovery. She is in fact wounded to all appearance more severely than the deceased, having no less than nine wounds (one of which is 6 inches long and three quarters of an inch deep) about her head, arms and shoulders. Her deposition was taken this morning before Mr. May, and she had to be sustained by stimulants throughout this painful proceeding. Drs. van der Horck and Ayres are doing all they can to save the poor creature's life, but it is to be feared the case is hopeless.

Gutierrez, the deceased, was formerly a clerk in the Colonial Secretary's office, and about three years ago he was nearly killed in a somewhat similar manner, his dying deposition having been taken by Mr. May on that occasion. The poor fellow's struggle with his assailant must have been both short and feeble, as he was a very slightly built and weakly man, while Newman is tall, wiry and rather powerfully built. There are only four wounds on the body, two being close together on the left side of the throat, a slight cut on the left arm and one over the socket of the right eye. The latter penetrates to the brain, and was doubtless the cause of death. A more murderous weapon than the one used could hardly be found; it has a handle about 2 feet long, of stout hard wood, and on the end of it is a piece of iron forming a spike on the one side and an axe on the other. In the hands of a powerful man like Newman, such a weapon can be used with resistless violence.

Newman seems to allege that the deceased had the tomahawk in his hands, and that he (Newman) had to wrest it from deceased before he used it. He does not deny killing the deceased, nor does he deny wounding the woman. The deceased was found on the bed by the police with his dress much disordered. Newman offered no resistance, but opened the door to admit the police and some neighbours, saying "I'm your prisoner; I've finished them, and sent them flying to heaven." Although the deceased was found dead on the bed, in the state already described, his helmet was found out as if by the tomahawk. The woman's depositions, which were taken at the Hospital this morning, show that the body must have been lifted after the wounds were inflicted and placed on the bed. When the prisoner was brought in to hear the wounded woman's evidence, he made a great disturbance, calling the woman his "Darling Louisa." In the course of the examination he said "Speak true, Lou," and again, "Louisa, you are a murderer."

DYING DEPOSITION.—Louisa Lockhardt deposed:—I am a single woman; I have known Charles Newman about 2 years, and have been living with him the last 6 months. We went to Shanghai with Newman. We returned from Shanghai last Tuesday or Wednesday, and then went to live in a house at Wanchai. Newman was in the house with me yesterday afternoon and went out at 9 o'clock at night. The Portuguese man (Gutierrez) who is dead came to the house about 5 o'clock, with a man named Nutall who belongs to the Naval Yard, and went out with Newman at 9 o'clock. Gutierrez and Newman had a little drop of gin and water before they went out; they appeared to be on friendly terms. I have known Nutall for a long time. About half an hour after the three had left the house, Gutierrez returned. I asked him where Newman was, and he (Gutierrez) said he had gone down town on some business. From what Gutierrez said to me, I expected that Newman would be back in about 10 minutes. Gutierrez and I had some shandy; Gutierrez was sitting on a chair at the table when Newman came back, and I was sitting on the sofa. Newman shut all the lower doors; I could see he was very excited and I said "Newman, what is the matter with you?" He said, "Oh! didn't you do it nice, haven't you had it nice?" I said "Don't be foolish, don't talk such nonsense." Gutierrez stood up and said "What is the matter, why do you talk so foolishly?" Newman replied "I've got you now; I'll give it to you." Newman caught hold of Gutierrez, and I tried to get him away. Newman had the tomahawk (produced) in his hand, and then cut at me with it. He wounded me on the throat and arm; and at the same time he cut at Gutierrez on the head and neck. I saw the blood flowing from Gutierrez, and he then fell down. I then became insensible and do not know how it was that I carried me down stairs. Gutierrez fell down at the top of the stairs inside the room. The next thing I recollect is being carried along the road to the Hospital. On Wednesday evening, Newman brought Gutierrez up to see me; they appeared friendly on that occasion. When Newman came back on the last occasion he appeared very excited; I cannot say whether it was from drink or passion. I think it was from drink; Gutierrez was quite sober. I think it must have been about 11 o'clock when Newman returned.

In answer to the prisoner she said:—The room door was open when you came back. You did not have to knock at the door for about 10 minutes. The door is a trap door and it was open, as was also the street door.

Prisoner: When I entered the room, did not Gutierrez have the tomahawk in his hand?

Witness: No; you went into the room and got the tomahawk. I did not take hold of your throat; I did not bite you on the arm. (Prisoner shows marks on neck and right arm.)

Prisoner: On your dying bed will you swear that the trap-door was open?

Witness: I will swear it; the outer door was open.

Prisoner: Did I not tell you that I was going to San Francisco by the next boat and that I would bring Gutierrez to look after you?

Witness: Yes, you did say that. You told me this the day before; but still you turned round and used the tomahawk.

After the proceedings were concluded the prisoner said "Good bye, Louisa; I forgive you for all you've done; you've murdered him, and now you've murdered me."

The case was then remanded until Monday, the 12th instant, to enable the inquest to be concluded.

THE INQUEST.—The inquest was opened at 3 o'clock, before the Coroner (C. V. Creagh, Esq.), and the following gentlemen as a Jury:—Messrs J. K. Morrison, H. Sheppard, and H. Miller. After viewing the body and visiting the scene of the crime, evidence was called.

The house where the deceased met his death presented a most dreadful spectacle. Clotted blood was lying in two large pools, one at the head of the stairs and one between the bed and the stairs. The bed was covered with blood, and there were bloody footmarks all over the floor, showing indications of a terrible struggle.

The murderer's victims must have fallen where they were struck, as, with the exception of the footmarks, the dots of blood are confined to one spot. The blood had oozed through the flooring to the basement. The room was very recently furnished, there being nothing but a bed, two tables, a cane settee, and a couple of chairs in the place. There were, besides these things, several empty gin bottles, one of which had evidently been in use as a candlestick, a couple of tins of preserves and sundries.

Julius Seier, sworn, states:—I have known the deceased for the last four or five years. I do not know his Christian name. He resided with his parents at Wyndham Street. Last night, at about half past 11 o'clock, I heard a noise next door to my house at Queen's Road East. The noise I heard was as if some one was throwing furniture down, and then I heard the screams of a woman. I ran down stairs and saw an engineer and the clerk in the employ of Ligths & Co. They were calling out to some one on the verandah "What is the matter?" I looked up and saw Newman standing there. He at first said "What do you want?" and then said "It is all over; and, throwing up his hands, added, "We're all flying in heaven, were all gone to heaven." We saw P. C. Kely in the road and told him there was an awful noise in Newman's house, and thought there was murder being committed. He knocked at the door, and Newman came down and opened the door, saying, "I've done the deed; I am your prisoner." At the same time handing the axe to the constable. A Chinaman happened to pass at the time, and Newman rushed at the Chinaman, knocked him down in the street and beat him continuously, until dragged away by the constable. He also kicked Mr. Naser in the stomach. The prisoner then walked away with the constable quietly, but after going a short distance they returned, went up stairs, and brought down the woman. The prisoner asked me and the others standing round to call a chair. The woman was put into a chair, and I accompanied her as far as the Eastern Market, when, meeting a lokong, I told him to accompany her to the Hospital. Mr. Naser and myself then returned and entered the house, the prisoner and the constable having left. I found a pool of blood at the top of the stairs and another at the foot of the bed. On the bed I saw the body of deceased. He was quite dead.

Dr. van der Horck proved having examined the body of the deceased, the principal wound of which there were four or five. One of these penetrated the brain, and was the immediate cause of death. He said the woman was brought to the Hospital a little before the deceased. She has a large wound on the right side of the skull, laying open the skull and penetrating the right ear. A second wound, cutting through the lobe of the left ear and cutting through the skull, a third wound on the right side of the face, laying open the cavity of the mouth; a fourth wound just below the chin, about 6 inches long; below that again there is a fifth wound about one inch wide, extending in a diagonal direction about 6 inches in depth, where it appeared to communicate with another wound just below the collar-bone. There is an eighth wound on the left side of the neck, a little below the chin. There was a flesh wound on the lower left arm, another contusion on the upper left arm, and a third contusion on the lower right arm. There were also marks of injury on the right side of her tongue. These wounds were all of the same character as those of the deceased, and might all have been caused by the weapon produced.

At this stage the enquiry was adjourned until 3 o'clock to-morrow (Saturday) afternoon.

Police Intelligence.

(Before the Hon. C. May.)

August 3, 1878.

STRAGGLERS.

William Kent and Daniel O'Brien, seamen American barque Fitzpatrick, were charged with being stragglers and ordered to be conveyed on board their ships.

DESTITUTE AND TROUBLESOME.

John Collins, a seaman unemployed, was charged with assaulting P. C. Bond whilst in the due execution of his duty. It appears that defendant was not a boarder at the Home and the inmates were giving him meat and bread. Bond ordered him out of the Home, whereupon defendant assaulted him.

Mr. Loring certified that Collins was a very troublesome man and would never get employment. He (Mr. Loring) would recommend his being sent home as a distressed seaman.—7 days' hard labour.

THE FRACAS ON BOARD THE "ABABIA."

Henry Astor, steward British ship Ababia, surrendered to his bail this afternoon, on a charge of shooting and wounding one of the crew whilst the ship was at sea.

After some further evidence, defendant said he would reserve his defence, and was committed for trial, but was admitted to bail as before.

BURGLARY.

Tung Awa, bricklayer, and K'wok Afuk cooing, and Wan Akwai, and Chan Acheong, marine hawkers, were charged on remand with being concerned in committing a burglary at the residence of Captain Benning, No. 53 Wyndham Street. The last prisoner was charged with the actual commission of the crime and the other three with being concerned in the robbery. A quantity of plated forks, spoons and knives were stolen and these have nearly all been recovered.

Captain Benning was examined last evening, and said that on the 1st August his servant told him something which had occurred at his house 53 Wyndham Street. He (Captain Benning) found that two panes of glass had been broken and any person could be putting one hand through the window and the other in the room, and thus gain admission to the house. The drawers of the sideboard in the dining room were found to have been opened and the contents, consisting of table-ware the entire value of which was about $100, carried away. Witness gave information to the police on the 3rd August. He knew the fourth defendant, who was formerly acting as a substitute for one of his chauffeurs. He remained so for about a couple of months and left about 12 months ago. He had also seen the face of the first prisoner before, but he could not say where. The other two prisoners he knew nothing about.

The case was continued this afternoon and evidence taken regarding the last defendant's antecedents, and the case was then further remanded.

CHINA.

(North China Herald.)

Considerable excitement was occasioned in Hongkong on the evening of the 20th ult. by the conduct of a man named Charles Newman, who, armed with a loaded revolver and a Japanese dagger, threatened the lives of different persons. The assistance of the Municipal Police, we are informed, was sought for in vain; their reason for not arresting the man being that he was an American, and that the threats were used in houses and not in the street. It was believed that he was an American, and some of the persons whose lives had been threatened went to the United States Consulate Officials, and having made depositions, the Marshal was sent to arrest Newman, who, however, on being confronted with that arm of the law, declared that he was a native of British Columbia and denied his authority. The Marshal having only hearsay proof that he was an American, refused, but his interference had a beneficial effect; it caused Newman to be more choice in his language and less demonstrative with his formidable weapons, at least, for a time. But later in the evening, he and his wife appeared at the bar of the Hotel des Colonies and wished to be supplied with something to drink. Their request was refused, whereupon Newman again indulged in his dangerous diversions, and the assistance of the French Municipal police was obtained. These at once took Newman and his wife into custody, and marched them off to the Police Station, where they were detained. On the 30th ult. they were taken before Mr. R. A. Mowat, who heard evidence as to the prisoner's conduct in the Hotel des Colonies, but nothing was said as to his previous conduct in Hongkong. Apparently the police for the Settlements North of the Yang-king-pang were unaware of the prisoners being in custody.—Thus, in ignorance, no doubt, of the worse features of the case, the Magistrate treated the prisoners with leniency, and troubled himself to obtain a free passage for them to Hong Kong, from which colony they came to Shanghai about two months ago.

SHANGHAI.

(North China Herald.)

Considerable excitement was occasioned in Hongkong on the evening of the 20th ult. by the conduct of a man named Charles Newman, who, armed with a loaded revolver and a Japanese dagger, threatened the lives of different persons. The assistance of the Municipal Police, we are informed, was sought for in vain; their reason for not arresting the man being that he was an American, and that the threats were used in houses and not in the street. It was believed that he was an American, and some of the persons whose lives had been threatened went to the United States Consulate Officials, and having made depositions, the Marshal was sent to arrest Newman, who, however, on being confronted with that arm of the law, declared that he was a native of British Columbia and denied his authority. The Marshal having only hearsay proof that he was an American, refused, but his interference had a beneficial effect; it caused Newman to be more choice in his language and less demonstrative with his formidable weapons, at least, for a time. But later in the evening, he and his wife appeared at the bar of the Hotel des Colonies and wished to be supplied with something to drink. Their request was refused, whereupon Newman again indulged in his dangerous diversions, and the assistance of the French Municipal police was obtained. These at once took Newman and his wife into custody, and marched them off to the Police Station, where they were detained. On the 30th ult. they were taken before Mr. R. A. Mowat, who heard evidence as to the prisoner's conduct in the Hotel des Colonies, but nothing was said as to his previous conduct in Hongkong. Apparently the police for the Settlements North of the Yang-king-pang were unaware of the prisoners being in custody.—Thus, in ignorance, no doubt, of the worse features of the case, the Magistrate treated the prisoners with leniency, and troubled himself to obtain a free passage for them to Hong Kong, from which colony they came to Shanghai about two months ago.
